Grenson x Tenue de Nîmes - Factory report
from Tenue de Nîmes

Tenue de Nîmes visits the Grenson factory in Rushden, Northamptonshire to salute its first shoe created in collaboration with Grenson. They've developed a black Tenue de Nîmes interpretation of the Grenson classic: the Fred. The shoe is a limited edition high top brogue with a triple layer, blue tone upper and leather sole. Tenue de Nîmes was amazed by all the stages of English craftsmanship to finally come together in this characteristic shoe. And you will be too. It's a long video, but worth the watch.

GRENSON x TENUE DE NIMES

 Grenson, Grenson Boots, Rushden Engeland, Tenue de Nimes

Tenue de Nimes blijft de vaderlandse hipheid een klein beetje op niveau houden door met durf, vertrouwen en toewijding de spreekwoordelijke kop boven het maaiveld uit te blijven steken. En heel soms wordt dat zoals in het geval van deze fijne Amsterdamse spijkerbroekenwinkel beloond. Tenue de Nimes heeft met een zeer exclusieve en daardoor best bijzonder collaboratie met het Engelse Grenson nu zelfs een respectvolle vermelding op het toonaangevende hypebeast.com gescoord. Het Tenue de Nimes-blog gunt de lezer een kijkje in de Engelse fabriek van Grenson en laat zien met hoeveel liefde de prachtige (en natuurlijk nogal onbetaalbare) boots vervaardigd worden. Cool! This is the second video from the Tenue de Nimes guys, this time they visit the Grenson factory in Rushden, Northamptonshire. They developed a black Tenue de Nimes interpretation of the Grenson classic: the Fred. The shoe is a limited edition high top brogue with a triple layer -blue tone- leather sole. You can view this shoe at the bottom of this post.

The video below explains about the processes, what it takes to make a shoe, and the nearly 200 pit stops that the Tenue de Nimes shoe had to make before it got delivered in Amsterdam.

Grenson x Tenue de Nîmes – Factory Report

Vind ik leuk Vind dit als eerste van je vrienden leuk.

Last November, dutch label Tenue de Nîmes cooperated with british shoe company Grenson, to create the first Grenson x Tenue de Nîmes shoe, a Tenue de Nîmes interpretation of the Grenson classic.

This limited edition, black, high top brogue with a triple layer -blue tone- leather sole, named Fred, was made in the Grenson factory in Northamptonshire. Tenue de Nîmes was amazed by all the stages of English craftsmanship and decided to do a video about the factory and the nearly 200 pit stops that this shoe had to make before it got delivered in Amsterdam, in Tenue de Nîmes Concept Store.

Tenue de Nimes x Grenson

We have a lunchtime treat that we just had to share with you: a boot to salivate over and a video to help you procrastinate away your Wednesday afternoon. In November last year Dutch retailer, Tenue de Nimes visited the Grenson factory in Rushden, Northamptonshire to salute their first collaborative shoe. They developed a black Tenue de Nimes interpretation of the Grenson classic and blog favourite, the Fred. The shoe is a limited edition high top brogue with a triple layer, blue tone leather sole and is quite something...

The blue tone leather sole...

As we all know, Grenson is all about traditional craftsmanship, quality and style. Everything is made in the same factory on Queen Street in Rushden. Recently they have collaborated with British brand A&P and New York fashion store Off and it is great to see such a brand collaborate in this way. Tenue de Nimes were amazed by all the stages of English craftsmanship to finally come together in this characteristic shoe. So, they decided to create a video documenting the factory and the close to two hundred jiff stops their shoe had to make before it being delivered in Amsterdam. I am going to be popping in to see Grenson's tomorrow morning to learn more about this collaboration and to discover what other delights they have in store for us over the coming months so will report back to you all shortly. In the meantime, take a break from work, make yourself a cuppa and watch the below video...

BOOTS: GRENSON X TENUE DE NIMES BROGUES LIVE FROM THE BERRY

Grenson x Tenue de Nimes – Factory report

Since most of us need something on our feet day today, I'm going to be looking at boots and shoes from time to time here. And I've got a damn fine specimen with which to start that trend: Grenson x Tenue de Nimes brogue boots. In November last year Tenue de Nimes visited the Grenson factory in Rushden, Northamptonshire to salute the construction of the first Grenson x Tenue de Nimes shoe. The company developed a black Tenue de Nimes interpretation of the Grenson classic: the Fred. The shoe is a limited edition high top brogue with a triple layer -blue tone- leather sole. Last week I had a meeting with Menno van Meurs, who's one of the owners of the unique Tenue de Nimes store. Tenue de Nimes was amazed by all the stages of English craftsmanship and decided to do a new collaboration with Grenson (this is definitely a scoop). Check out these amazing pics after the jump.

Pictures made by Joachim Baan.

Vind ik leuk Menno Van Meurs, Nora Vlasselaerts en 8 anderen vinden dit leuk.
